THE TIMES KODAK.

Interesting News Items Gathered Around Salem.

J. W. Sublett, of Front Royal, yesterday took charge of Hotel Duval.

The Camden Iron works yesterday shipped a quantity of building material to Bluefield.

There was a frost on Catawba Wednesday night, which nipped the tomatoes and beans in the gardens.

Mrs. J. Harry Chapman and son, who spent the winter and spring in Portsmouth, returned yesterday.

Rev. T. Masso, the Japanese missionary, delivered one of his most interesting lectures yesterday in the Methodist Church.

Letters received here yesterday from A. Riddick show that he arrived at Lima, Peru, his destination, about the 12th of May.

W. P. Edmonds, the new supervisor of the Radford division, and R. G. Kenely, division engineer of the Norfolk and Western railroad, were in town yesterday on business.

It makes Salem look almost like a flag station to see the two "mail catchers" recently erected near the overhead bridge so that the vestibule train can take the mail without stopping.

John L. Armstrong, who graduates with first honors at Hampden-Sidney College, and who is valedictorian of his class, has been appointed adjunct professor there. Commencement begins there on the 10th inst.

When Supreme Chancellor H. R. Coleman was here recently he conferred the five degrees of the order of Pilgrim Knights upon thirteen members, and then assisted them to organize a tabernacle with W. H. Wade as chief, and J. B. Level and Leon Palmer, aides. These officers were elected for life. The tabernacle will meet once a month, and is subordinate to the grand lodge, which is at Jerusalem.

Belle Maguire, who has been running a disorderly house for several months in the "flats," was yesterday taken to Christiansburg with her three children by Officers Lloyd and Johnson, as she is wanted there to serve out a sentence of six months for a similar offense, while her children will be sent to the poorhouse. The unfortunate woman created quite a scene when the officers went to arrest her and would have fought, but the sight of handcuffs subdued her. She wept bitterly all the way on the train, and altogether presented a miserable appearance.

A well known Salemite, who is greatly interested in the union meetings, yesterday wrote a letter to Mr. Schofield asking him next Sunday afternoon, when he addresses men, to lecture on two subjects, which the writer considered greater curses than whiskey.

"1. The manufacture and use of cigarettes, which is ruining the youth of the country and which leads to the use of morphine and the grave.

"2. The usurious rates of interest in vogue at this time which are robbing our men of life and energy and filling our land with homeless paupers, and which will bring forth a state of things which makes one shudder to think of, whilst we are now trying to shut our eyes to the result, trusting in chance and not in God, knowing that it is a violation of His laws as well as those of the State."

Should Mr. Schofield treat these subjects in the same masterly manner that he has treated others the sender of the letter thinks much additional good will be done.

"MANY of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's cough remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This remedy has proven of so much value for colds, croup and whooping cough in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. "I HAVE two little grand children who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhea remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach; one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my house work.—MRS. W. L. DUNAGAN, Bon Aqua, Hickman County, Tenn. For sale by The Charles Lyle Drug Company, druggists.

Those "Magic City" bindings are going like hot cakes. Bring in your numbers and get them exchanged for a bound copy costs 75 cents or $1.50.

MACADAM ROADBUILDING.

Proper Depth of Excavation and Thickness of Broken Stone Layer.

Let us suppose that all our grading has been completed; that the hills have been cut down and the hollows filled till the line of our roadway rises and falls only by moderate grades; that the earthwork required by these changes has become fairly settled and consolidated.

We must now turn our attention to the opening of a bed or excavation to receive the material, and this in most cases is a very simple task. We begin by fixing the center line of the roadway, and having determined this by necessary measurements we indicate the center line by driving a row of spikes or iron bolts about 25 feet apart. The distance apart of these bolts had better be uniform, so that they can be easily found by measuring from one to another. The spikes or bolts should be driven down a little below the surface, so as to avoid the chance of stumbling by horses. As the work progresses we can set up wooden stakes for temporary use at the points where these irons are driven in the ground. We now lay off the width of the macadam roadway proper by measuring half this width from the center stakes or bolts in each direction toward the sides and drive a line of side stakes, say 25 feet apart, along on either side of the proposed macadam roadway. These two lines will fix the outer sides of the excavation.

The depth of the excavation will depend, of course, on the thickness of the macadam material to be used. If this thickness is to be six inches, and if well constructed this will be sufficient for all ordinary country roads, the excavation should be six inches deep below the grade line of the finished surface. This rule is not absolute, but is sufficiently accurate for all ordinary purposes. If the ground is moderately firm, the sides of the excavation should be nearly perpendicular, and the bottom of the excavation should have a slight downward slope from center to sides, corresponding in some degree with the slope of the finished roadway. This will be about one-half inch fall to each foot in width of the roadway. If the earth is of a soft, sandy, yielding nature, the broken stone of the macadam roadway will be easily ground off at the edge of the excavation and pressed into the soft earth by the wheels of passing wagons, and to prevent this it will be best to excavate along the outer edge to a somewhat greater depth than six inches, and in this manner form a shallow trench in which can be placed a line of field stone or boulders to sustain the road metal in place and prevent its becoming pressed into the earth at the roadside.—I. B. Potter in Good Roads.

The Same Repairs Every Year.

The supervisors of roads for the various townships in Center county, Pa., have adopted new methods for the repair of roads. An examination of the township books shows that for many years the same expense has been required year after year to repair the damage done by floods that are permitted to wash away the material put on the roads the previous years. At present no one is responsible for repairing any slight damage that may need attention, and as a result the improvement of the public thoroughfares requires annually an excessive sum of money, due entirely to negligence. The supervisors, in order to insure a daily supervision of the roads, have decided to hire men to work on the roads regularly during the spring, summer and autumn months. Their respective townships will be divided into districts, and a man to whom the contract of road repairs is awarded will be responsible for the care of the roads in his district and liable to any damage resulting from the bad condition of the same.—Philadelphia Press.

How He Works Out His Road Tax.

The road hand arrives at the appointed place, where the road work is to begin, at any time from 8 to 10 o'clock in the morning. He is equipped with an apology for a weeding hoe perhaps, which he uses vigorously for a few minutes, pulling loose earth out of the ditches and placing it upon the road, to be speedily carried back by the next rain. He then rests two or three times as long as he has worked, discussing public and other questions, takes two hours at noon and goes home early in the afternoon, having done about three or four hours' work during the whole day.—Professor O. H. Sheffield.

The Mud Pikes of America.

"Within five years," says Edward L. Wakeman, "I have tramped along 8,000 miles of British roads. Each time I stop my foot upon their broad, firm, even surface, every drop of American blood in me tingles with shame at the thought of the mud pikes and bottomless road sloughs of our own splendid country, rich, great and strong enough to match the roads of Europe without a week's delay."

As one who was raised a farmer boy, and who in common with others worked the roads to no avail, I am now unreservedly committed to all honest endeavor that will lead to better roads and shall work and teach to that end.—Professor L. Higgins.

HANG UP YOUR HAMMOCK.

How to Make It Pretty and What to Wear In It.

Have you hung out your hammock? A hammock, a novel and a negligee gown are justifiable indulgences when warm weather sets in. With plenty of cushions and a story over which one may fall asleep—a volume of sermons might answer the purpose better, by the way, although such literature is not usually recommended as a restful summer reading—a hammock is an ideal lounging place on hot days. If lying still and reading or dreaming becomes monotonous, by swinging a few minutes a sufficiently respectable amount of seasickness may be produced to let one fancy that one is enjoying the delights of a yachting excursion.

For several seasons it has been the fashion to make one's own hammock, and the materials for these wonderful webs have been offered as regular summer goods in the shops, large hanks of twisted silken cord and big netting needles to carry it. Fanciful cotton hammocks, too, are displayed ready made in various brilliant hues, decorated with fringe and valance like the housings of a knight's horse in the days of chivalry. Finally there are the common manilla nets in red, yellow and black, and they are the most serviceable of the three, although the least expensive and the least ornamental.

As for cushions, plush and silk are better for the drawing room than for the veranda. Blue and brown denim embroidered with white, green and gray linen and plain scarlet ticking will make as pretty covers for a set of out of door cushions as can be desired—covers that will go through rough usage and be none the worse for it.

Cool gowns go with the hammock, of course—something made of pongee or linen lawn or some other thin stuff. The sheer tropical fabric called pina would be exactly the thing, but that is not so easily obtained as swiss or silk muslin.

A sketch is given of a negligee gown of mauve mousseline de sole. It is shirred in at the waist to fit the figure, and the bottom of the skirt is trimmed with a flounce headed by a puffing. A wide double velvet ribbon covers the shoulders. Violet velvet ribbon is arranged in a choux with long ends at the left side of the corsage. A violet velvet collar surrounds the neck, and the elbow sleeves are trimmed with the same color.

JUST LIKE A MAN'S.

They Are Even Selling Women's Vests Ready Made This Year.

The delights of shopping are beginning to be tempered by heat of the streets and the closeness of the stores. Already there is a perceptible falling off of attendance in the dry goods temples, and that in spite of the bargains advertised and spread out to induce custom. There are a great many genuine bargains among the articles shown, for all goods are being sold at unusually low prices this season, and a complete outfit from head to foot may be obtained at a moderate expenditure by a woman who knows where and how to buy.

A new departure is the selling of ready made vests for women. They have come into fashion within a year, being produced to fill the hiatus in the front of the open blazer. They are made in every respect like a man's waistcoat, except that they are sometimes double breasted, and they come in all colors and materials, scarlet cloth being especially favored this season. A stiff shirt bosom and collar, with a man's tie, are usually worn with them.

A large number of pretty, fluffy things for the neck have appeared lately, lace, chiffon, ribbons, gimp and all sorts of trimming being employed in their manufacture. These trifles are a dangerous indulgence for a short necked woman, but they do good service in softening the lines of a long neck. There is no end to the variety of styles shown in this kind of goods, for most of them are imported, and the Parisian mind has particular ingenuity in the invention of decorative adjuncts to the toilet. A number of them are made with a high standing collar, which is rather burdensome in warm weather, but this fashion is not invariable.

A very pretty yoke was seen made of gathered black chiffon and bordered with a full double ruffle of the same. A sketch is given of a more elaborate arrangement, the foundation of which is a yoke of black moire trimmed with jet. It is surrounded with wide flounces of chantilly lace and fastens in front under a large lace bow with very long ends. This makes a pretty addition to a plain black costume.
